

Politics, Policy and Law, BA

Program Description

Politics, policy, and law students learn the concepts, theories, and investigative methods associated with the field, while also building critical thinking and presentation skills honed through in-class and real-world experiences. Political science, public policy, and public law as fields focus on understanding the interests, interactions, and institutions that shape our communities, both locally and globally. In this program, students will build the knowledge and skills to navigate and influence these communities.
